

Polar Bear

A white wind roars over the frozen tundra, small ice crystals peck at the skin.
A lumbering beast wanders, alone.

The crackling of ice breaks the uneathy silence, piercing black eyes stare you down. A sleek seal emerges from the depths, polar bear makes a leap, flying... An inch away, the seal is gone as quickly as she came.

Frustrated, he turns away and disappears once again into that swirling white blizzard.

- by Lana Kenworthy
Sixth Grade
Telluride Intermediate School
Caroline Farkouh's English Class
Honorable Mention #9 2020 Rella Award
K-8 category